WASHINGTON PARENTS

Families in Washington must "qualify" for homeschooling, according to state law. Please indicate under which provision your child fulfills the compulsory school attendance law in Washington.

- I have 45 college credits, can therefore homeschool, and have filed my Intent to Homeschool with the school district.
- I have completed the 10-hour homeschool parent-qualifying course and have filed my Intent to Homeschool with the school district.
- I homeschool with a state-certified teacher at least one hour each week and I have filed my Intent to Homeschool with the school district.
- I have enrolled my child in a Washington private school that allows me to teach my student at home.

FLORIDA PARENTS

Florida families do not need to be "qualified" to homeschool, but they need to be "authorized" to homeschool, according to state law. Please indicate under which provision your child fulfills the compulsory school attendance law in Florida.

- I have notified my county school board in writing of my intent to homeschool.
- I have enrolled my child in a Florida private school that allows me to teach my student at home.
- My child has reached his 16th birthday and I no longer need to notify any authorities.

MAINE PARENTS

Maine families need to notify the State's Dept. of Education and the local Superintendent of Schools every year they intend to homeschool. Please indicate under which provision your child fulfills the law in Maine.

- I have notified the Dept of Education in Augusta of my intent to homeschool for the current or upcoming school year.
- I have notified the local Superintendent of Schools of my intent to homeschool for the current or upcoming school year.
- I have enrolled my child in a Maine private school that allows me to teach my student at home.
- My child has reached his 17th birthday and I no longer need to notify any authorities.
